

C&C Milano, Corporate segnalazione

Ingrid Rasmussen, Fotografi

Fiona McCarthy, Redattori/Stylist

Style Interiors

ARTS and CRAFTS

In her west London house, Kim Hersov, co-founder of the boho lifestyle label Talitha, has created an eclectic family home filled with flea-market finds

Words Fiona McCarthy
Photographs Ingrid Rasmussen

For Kim Hersov, her home reflects her nomadic sensibilities; it's a kaleidoscope of rich, saturated colours and collectibles found by trawling the world's best flea markets with her great friend, the interior designer Hubert Zandberg.

Hersov describes the house as "eclectic and very personal, filled with lots of things lovingly gathered over time". Alongside old seashells, bamboo chairs and gilded screens, she has combined the irreverence of her artist husband, Barry Reigate, with antique pieces and a sense of old Hollywood glamour inspired by her own Californian childhood. "The house has a personality all of its own, but with four kids, it's a real home, too."

talithacollection.com; hzinteriors.com

Left The silk wallpaper in the bedroom is Madison by Stereo Interiors. The cushions are covered in a fabric by Alton-Brooke. The bed was custom-made by Hubert Zandberg Interiors (HZI)
Below In the living room, the sofa is covered in a fabric by Zimmer + Rohde. Hersov inherited the throw from her grandmother. The cushions are covered in fabrics by Pierre Frey. The artwork is by Alastair Mackinven

Left The Victorian bamboo planter in the bedroom was a gift from Hersov's grandmother. The artwork is by Barry Reigate — a Valentine's gift made on discarded envelopes

